

Week 6:

This week was reserved for presentations on Units One and Two. Well, all the presentations done by the other groups were quite informative and I got to learn some interesting stuff. Some stuff like the basic structure of a computer, its organization, its operation, LLM, and other things related to technology.

My group did a presentation on Linux. A new thing that I learned this week was how to use the Miro(mind map) app. I also got to know about Prezi(app). While we did not use Prezi, it was good to know that this application exists and can help with presentations.
